Fund management comment

Following the correction in April, the stock markets were able to rise again in May and reached new highs in Europe and the USA. Weaker US economic data and the fact that US inflation did not rise any further eased investor concerns. Hopes that the Fed would soon cut interest rates rose accordingly and risk appetite on the markets increased again, with the result that risk premiums on EUR bonds also recorded new lows for the year. In the fund, we benefited from the equity quota increase in April and only made slight adjustments. We bought Richemont after the company dispelled investor concerns driven by strength in the jewellery segment and picked up Alphabet as the company delivered surprisingly strong margins, while the trend in the search segment appears very robust despite artificial intelligence. On the fixed income side, the fund benefited from falling risk premiums on credit positions, but also from price gains across the board due to falling interest rates. Commodities saw a consolidation in May after the strong rally and ended the month more or less unchanged, although the underlying drivers remain intact.

BVI method: The charts and tables regarding performance shown here are based on own calculations according to the method developed by the German Investment Funds Association (BVI). They illustrate past performance. Future performance can deviate both positively and negatively from these calculations. Gross performance (BVI method) takes into account all charges at fund level (e.g. management fee), net performance plus the issue surcharge. Additional charges can arise for individual investors (e.g. custody account fees, commissions and other fees). Model calculation (net): An investor wants to purchase fund units for EUR 1,000 Euro. Considering a max 5.50. issue surcharge of 5.50 he has to pay EUR 55.00 Euro for the purchase. Also, fees may be charged for the administration of the safe custody account, which will lower the performance. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance.
